THE SUICIDES' TRAGEDY.

Trial of Daniel E. Sickles for the Murder of Philip Barton Key.

SEVENTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Conclusion of Mr. Cushman's Argument.

Summing up of Witnesses for the Defence.

Speech of Mr. Graham, for the Prosecution.

Court-room, Monday, April 11.

The Court-room was again crowded to-day, and the interest in the case seemed unabated.

The General Jury panel was called, the jurors being required to attend to-day, and the Judge directed them till Monday next.

About twenty minutes afterwards Mr. Sickles was conducted into Court, and took his seat in the dock.

A pamphlet containing the opinions of Judge Cadwalader was handed to the Judge.

Mr. CRAHAM resumed his argument, briefly reviewed the proceedings discussed on Saturday, and proceeded with his views on the amount of insanity necessary to relieve the accused of responsibility:

Mr. GRAHAM—If the jury believe that the prisoner had sufficient reason to know the nature and quality of the act, and to know that it was wrong, he is responsible. If there is any doubt on this point, the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of it. The jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the prisoner was insane at the time of the commission of the act. If they have a reasonable doubt, they must find him guilty. Where the line is to be drawn between responsibility and irresponsibility is a question of degree. It is impossible to draw a line of demarkation between the two conditions. The jury must be satisfied that the prisoner was insane at the time of the commission of the act, and that he was not responsible for it. Where there is a reasonable doubt, the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of it
